

Conference Overview

This conference will bring together experts representing a range of disciplines.

Far more people have heard of Tourette Syndrome (TS) than know what it actually looks and sounds like – or how it feels to the person who has it. That is a major reason why TS is among the most frequently misdiagnosed and mistreated neurologic disorders.

A change in perception begins with recognition of the full spectrum of symptoms and the associated behavioral disorders.

This conference will include a varied and inspiring program designed for everyone with an interest in increasing their knowledge regarding Tourette Syndrome and associated disorders. Our aim is to provide you with information, new thoughts and strategies, and resources in order to enlighten/empower you, sometimes in the midst of chaos. We hope to provide you with information and the ability to express these concerns and ask these questions you never knew were there or were okay to ask.

This conference will bring together experts representing a range of disciplines. The benefits of self-regulation techniques will be addressed in a session on Mind-Body Medicine, as well as the management of TS through the more traditional, yet sometimes misunderstood or confusing area of medication intervention. Free disability law services and hot topics in special education law will be addressed. We hope loved ones will feel a respite during the session on surviving and thriving the emotional ups and downs of living with a loved one with TS. The conference will conclude with one of our most popular sessions; the real panel of experts: those living with Tourette Syndrome – those who can perhaps give us the best insight of all.
